DISTRICT ASSOCIATION OF TEACHERS.

They Held Profitable Meeting at
At Deans School House.
Delayed Report.

The Association convened at 11 a. m. First an election was held, which resulted in the election of J. R. Postleweight chairman and Miss Ruth Hill, Secretary.

W. G. Conditt in his address of welcome, extended a hearty welcome to all those present, spoke of the necessity of education, especially among farmer boys. He says the day is fast approaching when the ignorant can occupy only the very lowest stations in life. So he urges the necessity of education in order to prepare the boys and girls of today to become worthy citizens in the future.

Prof. J. P. King said that Mr. Conditt struck the key-note exactly. We have been thinking too much about the past and too little of the future. We are now on the threshold of better things in Kentucky, and it is the duty of each of us to get busy, for the national government will not work out our local problems. He also spoke of the importance of co-operation between teacher and patrons and said the school should be the social center of the district.

Adjourned for noon.

1:15 p. m., song: "There will be showers of blessings," and prayer by W. G. Conditt.

The first topic for the afternoon, "The best way of grading rural schools," was discussed by Misses Margaret Moore and Ruth Hill, followed by some suggestions by Prof. King. He recommends that teachers get together and decide on a course of study for the various grades and strive to make our work more systematic. Other interesting suggestions were offered by Mr. Travis, Mrs. Fannie Walker and Miss Iva Hicklin.

On the subject "How to secure and hold attention of pupils during recitation," Hollis Franklin says teacher should insist that lessons be well prepared, for it is the pupil who knows the lesson best that is most attentive. Miss Mamie Henry says some new plan should be adopted for each recitation when interest seems to lag.

"The too talkative and too reserved pupil; how manage each, during recitation?" On this subject C. E. Thomas says that calling on the too talkative pupil too much, rather discourages the too reserved pupil. He thinks the teacher should aid the too reserved pupil on difficult subjects and lead him to express his opinion freely. He thinks it best not to allow the too talkative pupils to do all the reciting.

E. D. Reynolds says that in order to secure regular attendance, the teacher should visit the homes and ascertain the cause of a child's absence from school. He says that above all else to secure good attendance, the teacher must treat all alike. "Discipline, the best thing for the pupil; how and why? In the absence of Miss Marian Richards and T. D. Stone to whom this topic was assigned, it was discussed by Clarence Thomson and Prof. King. They think it a good thing to consult with the parents on the misbehavior of a child. The teacher should be frank in telling parents of a child's work.

T. F. Newcom said that parents can best aid the teacher by sending to school regularly. Pupils should be required to give a reason for each time they are absent.

"Influence of books and pictures on the mind of the child." This was discussed by Misses Corda Smart and Lillie Postleweight. Miss Smart favors pictures, while Miss Postleweight objects, saying that she rather have her pupils draw on their imagination.

In speaking of "The County High School," Prof. J. P. King said that life is a set of problems to be worked out and the high school affords training to meet these problems. He urges the importance of taking a High School course especially to those preparing to teach. Prof. King also made a splendid talk on "Agriculture in our rural schools." He thinks it should be taught in all rural schools.

Teachers present were:—Mrs. Fannie Walker, Misses Margaret Moore, Mamie Henry, Mabelle Minor, Lena Woods, Bertha Moore, Corda Smart, Lillie Postleweight, Emma Terry, Clara Hurley and Ruth Hill. Messrs. Lonnie Moore, C. E. Thomas, Clarence Thomson, Hollis Franklin, E. D. Reynolds, Jeffrey Travis, Prof. Hawes and Prof. King.

Mrs. Minn Wheeler.
AN APPRECIATION.

Life is not to be estimated by its length, but by its character. The aim and motives from the sub-stratum and give meaning to the whole. The sparkling eye and radiant face like sunshine, that through the clouds, indicate a soul of light within. The frail, slender body is not the measure of the mind and spirit, whose dwelling place it is.

brilliant soul set in a weak body. Socially she was vivacious, pleasant and attractive. Her face wore a smile for all and her words sparkled with kindly good-will. Her bearing was modestly elegant. In her religious life she was devoted and faithful. She loved the church and gave freely of her time and means to further the cause of Christ. She will be long missed in the social and devotional gatherings of her church.

In the community, her neighborly, charitable nature impressed itself by word and deed. Her heart went with her deeds and flavored them for heart-comforts as well as physical relief.

In her home she was a true hostess, making gracious welcome for all, and shedding a benignant halo that brought ease and personal comforts to her guests.

Such a life is not in vain, but shall bear its fruits of blessings for many days hence.
